World Population Day

We celebrate world population day on July 11. Every year this day is celebrated in order to create awareness about increasing population in the world and the importance of population control. This day was established by UNDP in 1989, when our population reached five billion. The primary goal of world population day is to control the increasing population of the world. The world is facing many problems due to this massive population growth. Some of them are food shortage, pollution, poverty, crime, depleting natural resources and so on. This year we celebrate world population day under the theme of “A world of eight billion: towards a resilient future for all – harnessing opportunities and ensuring rights and choices for all.”

As a part of this celebration, a message on world population day was given to students during the assembly. We also conducted an essay writing competition for grades 6 and 7 on the topic ‘World Population Day’.

With regards,
